Activity: Volcanos (articles and comprehension exercises)

As an alternate topic (EEN articles had been done), we discussed volcanos in class today.

Debra brought a couple articles about volcanoes, and both volunteers and students read from the articles, then we completed some reading-comprehension questions based on the content. This took up the first hour plus, and then we enjoyed a prolonged break, with stories and conversation.

The readings about volcanoes were probably a little too technical to be enjoyed by the students, but they still graciously went along and added their own stories and observations.
